How to Teach English Pronunciation to Japanese Speakers

Joshua Popenoe, Popenoe Method

Over 20 years of study and practical experience teaching Japanese group classes and private clients in New York City, I created a complete methodology for teaching English pronunciation which has proven to be very successful.

Speech is a physical skill. Our first language is spoken unconsciously thanks to muscle memory, which allows us to focus on what we're saying, not on how we're moving our mouth to form the words. The pronunciation of other languages however often requires consciously learning new physical mechanics, sounds and rhythm patterns, etc. This is especially true for Japanese speakers learning English.

In this workshop I will present an overview of my methodology and specific examples of how I teach, including various techniques that are essential for Japanese speakers to learn. I will be delighted to answer any and all questions about my work and experience in this field.

Date & Time: Sept. 18 (Sun.) 10:00-12:00

Place: Online on Zoom, link to be provided later
