Period Poverty Project @ The University of Kitakyushu

Fiona Creaser, the University of Kitakyushu This presentation will focus on a research project which aims to bring awareness of menstrual equity and period poverty at the University of Kitakyushu. The project was started in October 2021 with a group of faculty, staff, and students at the University of Kitakyushu. The results of a survey conducted by the group showed that 30 percent of students had problems buying period products every month and nearly 60% of students had menstrual related problems every month. From April 2022 the period poverty project team will be working together with students to 1) give students access to free period products in the university, 2) hold workshops for students who wish to use sustainable period products such as menstrual cups and cloth sanitary pads 3) work with students on outreach programmes such as creating a period poverty bank (akin to a food bank) for women's shelters, and group homes in the local area, 4) give student led presentations about menstrual equity and period poverty to local schools in the area.
