Japan Association of Language Teachers (JALT)

Changes in English Teachers' Medium of Instruction throughout the Pandemic

Julia Kawamoto, Ehime U.; Eleanor Carson, Matsuyama U.; Ian Willey, Kagawa U.

This presentation will focus on how English teachers adapted their medium of instruction during the first two years of the pandemic. Data were gathered from surveys, teacher interviews, and class observation. In 2020, Japanese and non-Japanese teachers reported using more Japanese than normal on learning management systems (LMS) and synchronous systems (e.g., Zoom). In 2021, both groups of teachers returned to "normal" levels of Japanese/English use (i.e., using less Japanese). Surprisingly, however, both Japanese and non-Japanese teachers tended to use more Japanese for all teaching functions. Non-Japanese teachers tended to make greater use of writing functions, such as Chat, to reinforce their statements or instructions. Following the presentation, attendees will have the chance to share how they handle various teaching situations.
